Second Skin Diana Anhalt

When Diana Anhalt was eight years old, her family moved from New York City to Mexico. The twenty poems collected in her chapbook, SECOND SKIN, speak of coming to terms with displacement and succumbing to Mexico's magic. In time she would wear her second country like a second skin, reveling in its spontaneity, the warmth of its people, its natural beauty, the language. When she returned to the United States sixty years later, she was again faced with a culture that was alien to her. Her poems refer nostalgically to the challenge of shedding her second skin as she readapts to the country of her birth.
